The Northern Ontario Medical Journal was launched in 2007. It is a natural extension of the evolving health-care community in Northern Ontario and focuses on the people, places, institutions and research in the North. It is a morale booster, an information portal and a means of bringing the northern region together throughout stories of innovation, success, challenges and solutions. The journal is published quarterly (March, June, September, December) and is distributed across the North and throughout Ontario.
